DISSERTATION

- Assessing and Treating Chronic Pain in Community-Dwelling Older Adults with Dementia: A Single-Subject Approach. A study examining the effectiveness of acetaminophen in the treatment of osteoarthritic pain in older adults with dementia. Informal family caregivers assessed daily pain behaviors and persons with dementia completed daily video-taped activity protocols which were coded by trained observers. The overall effectiveness of acetaminophen as a pain reliever is presented through the analysis of both the caregivers' and trained observers' pain ratings.
